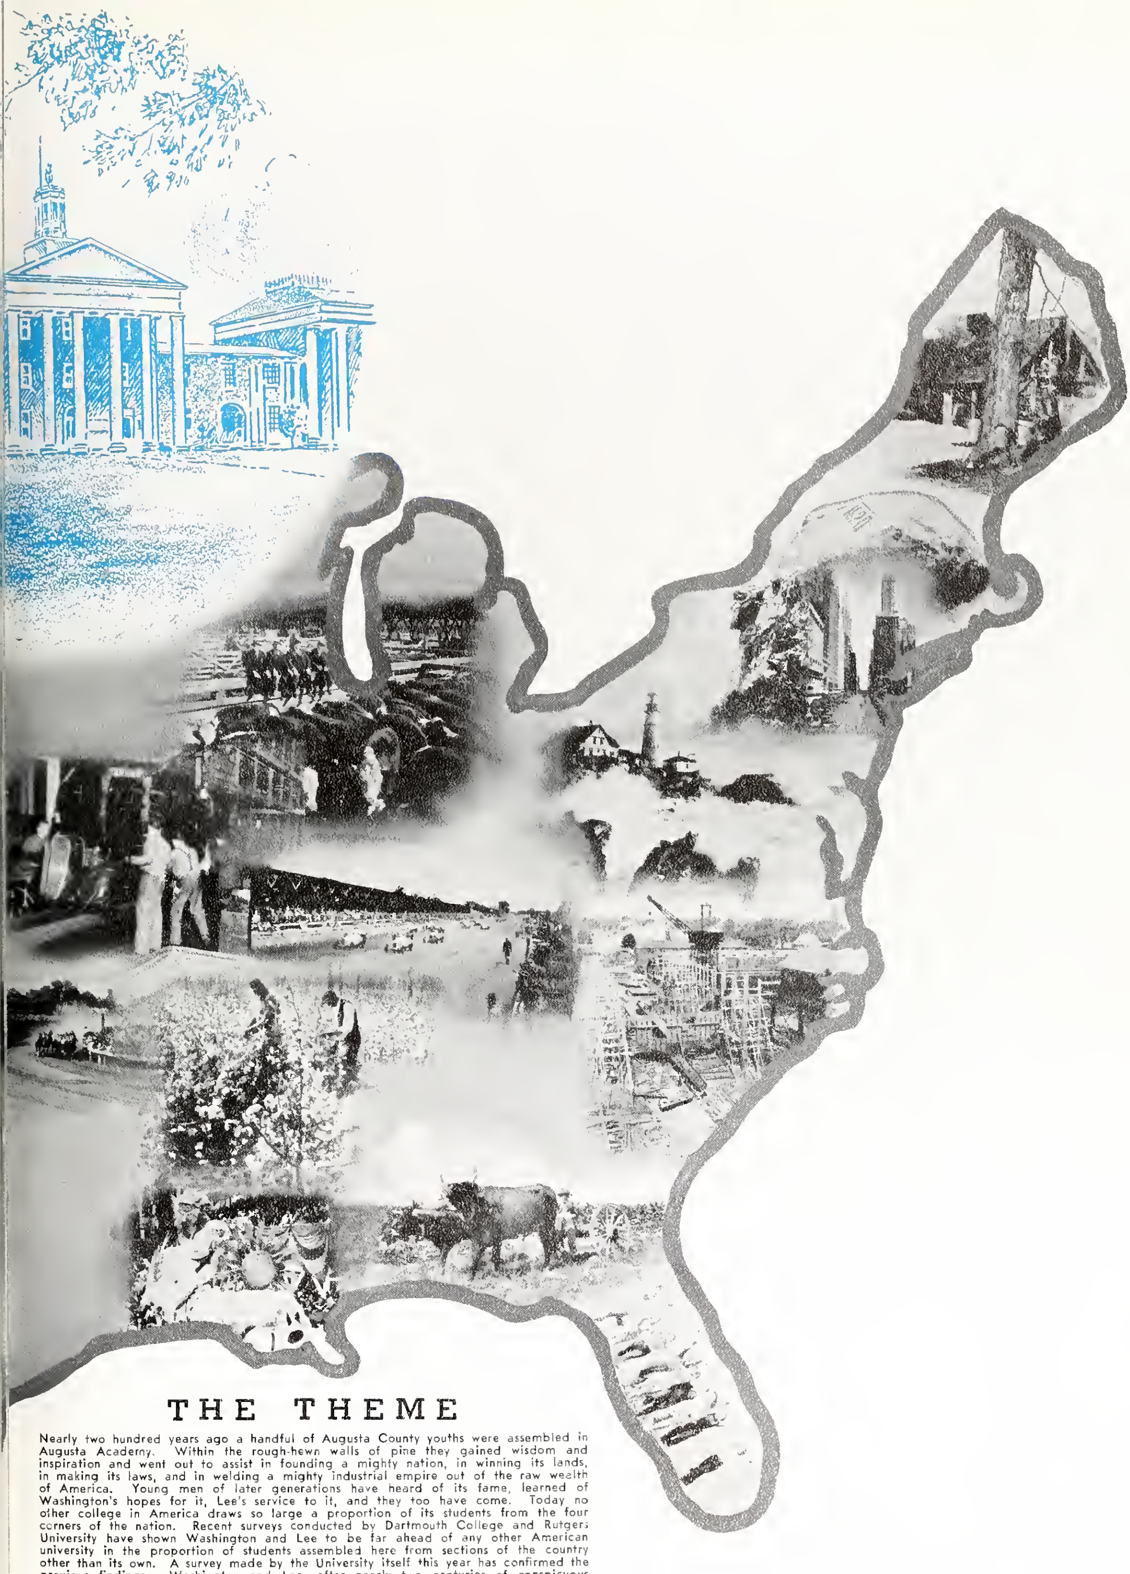
DEDICATION

The forty-third volume of The Calyx is dedicated to Dean Frank Johnson Gilliam whose culture of personality, tolerant wisdom, and enthusiasm for the high ideal translate into life the Washington and Lee spirit, while his unselfish heart makes available these qualities as resources of aid for every student.



THE THEME

Nearly two hundred years ago a handful of Augusta County youths were assembled in Augusta Academy. Within the rough-hewn walls of pine they gained wisdom and inspiration and went out to assist in founding a mighty nation, in winning its lands, in making its laws, and in welding a mighty industrial empire out of the raw wealth of America. Young men of later generations have heard of its fame, learned of Washington's hopes for it, Lee's service to it, and they too have come. Today no other college in America draws so large a proportion of its students from the four corners of the nation. Recent surveys conducted by Dartmouth College and Rutgers University have shown Washington and Lee to be far ahead of any other American university in the proportion of students assembled here from sections of the country other than its own. A survey made by the University itself this year has confirmed the previous findings. Washington and Lee, after nearly two centuries of conspicuous service to the nation, has achieved George Washington's ideal of a truly national university.

Washington and Lee's Presidents

. . . MEN WHO HAVE SHAPED OUR DESTINY

IN the course of its corporate history, Washington and Lee has had twelve presidents, twelve men of widely disparate antecedents but singularly unified aim. One of them came to Washington College after serving as commander of the Confederate armies in the Civil War. Another had sat in the cabinet of the United States. Others were chosen from the presidencies of other colleges, or from the faculty of the University itself. Yet whatever their previous environment or profession, they have proven men of fine character, broad educational philosophy, and whole-hearted devotion to Washington and Lee.

Of the seven principals of Augusta Academy and Liberty Hall prior to its incorporation, little is known today except the name. Beginning with its incorporation by act of the Virginia legislature in 1782, however, Liberty Hall Academy was administered by the Reverend William Graham, who served fourteen years. After graduation from Princeton, Graham came to Liberty Hall in 1776, bringing with him the carefully-recorded notes taken in his classes at Nassua Hall as a model for the Academy's courses. In 1796 he resigned to enter the Presbyterian ministry, and after a two-year inter-regnum, the trustees elected as president George Addison Baxter. This alumnus of Liberty Hall served until 1829, when he resigned to devote his declining years to the teaching of theology at the Union Theological Seminary, in Richmond.

In 1830 Louis Marshall, brother of John Marshall, and a native of Kentucky, assumed the presidency, bringing with him an advanced educational theory embodying features since adopted by various progressive institutions in this country. The innovations proved too advanced for the times, and Marshall gave up in 1834, to be succeeded by Henry Vethake. Dr. Vethake, a native of British Guiana, found administrative work less to his taste than teaching and two years later resigned to accept a professorship at the University of Pennsylvania, where he later became provost.

The same year Dr. Henry Ruffner, one of the greatest men in the history of the University, was inaugurated president. He served the college for twelve years and among other intelligent services began a history of the institution, today a valuable source of information. Ruffner was succeeded upon his resignation in 1848 by George Junkin, another remarkable personality. Dr. Junkin was a native of Pennsylvania, founder of Miami University and Lafayette College, and like his predecessor was opposed to the institution of slavery. An increasing divergence of sympathy between the president and the students over the issue of secession came to a climax in 1861, when the flag of the seceding state of South Carolina was raised by a group of students on the college flag staff. The incident was repeated, and before dusk Dr. Junkin was driving out of Lexington towards Philadelphia, never to return.

Never in its history had Washington College been more destitute or forlorn than it was at the close of Civil War hostilities. Not only did it lack equipment, endowment, president, and part of its faculty, but students were few in the impoverished South. Those professors who remained, however, had sufficient faith in the school to urge Robert E. Lee to accept its presidency. In the renascence which followed students hastened from the North as well as the South, endowment was trebled, and Washington College, with 400 students, became one of the significant schools of the nation.

Upon Lee's death his son, General George Washington Custis Lee, was called from a professorship at V. M. I. to succeed his father. After twenty-seven years of distinguished service Custis Lee retired in 1897 and William Lyne Wilson, former postmaster-general of the United States, was made president. He died in office after three brief years, and the trustees chose to succeed him George Hutcheson Denny, professor of Latin in the University, who bent his efforts towards the increase of endowment and student body. His conspicuous success in these endeavors brought him to the attention of trustees of the nascent University of Alabama, who called him to the presidency of that institution. His successor was Henry Louis Smith, member of a distinguished Southern family, who left the presidency of Davidson College to come to Lexington. In the seventeen years he guided the University's destinies, he proved a remarkable scholar and educator with a continuing insistence upon high standards of academic performance.

On December 31, 1928, Dr. Smith retired from the presidency, and for over a year Robert H. Tucker, dean of the University, was acting president. His service in that transition period was typical of the splendid work the Tucker and Campbell families have performed for the University. Henry St. George Tucker had served as acting president in 1900, and John L. and Henry D. Campbell had jointly fulfilled a similar office in 1911. Samuel L. Campbell, their great-great-grandfather, was acting president from 1796 to 1798, between the Graham and Baxter administration.

After considering a large number of possible successors to Dr. Smith the trustees of the University in 1930 chose Francis Pendleton Gaines, then president of Wake Forest College, for the office. Today, after a seven-year tenure of that office, Dr. Gaines is regarded as one of the outstanding college presidents of the country. For the first time in its nearly 200 years of existence the University is developing the plant and approaching the endowment necessary for full realization of its possibilities. Under Dr. Gaines' administration the schools, departments, and courses of the University have been integrated and a balanced curriculum has been achieved. In years to come there are doubtless other ideals to be attained, but those familiar with him and his work are convinced there is no abler man to secure their realization than Francis Pendleton Gaines.

WASHINGTON COLLEGE AT NIGHT

BOOK ONE · · ADMINISTRATION

Though national in its heritage and its appeal, Washington and Lee is primarily a product of the South. Born in the fine traditions of ante-bellum Virginia, it attracted first of all the pious and sincere youths of the Valley, training them in the typical cultural curriculum of the southern academy. Today every Southern state sends sons to the South's best-loved university: Texans, with the zeal of old Sam Houston; Kentuckians, conscious of their Virginia antecedents; Carolinians, Georgians, and the rest, all bring with them a devotion to Lee and to the Southern mode of life. The emphasis upon intellectual culture, personal honor, graciousness, and hospitality typical of that civilization are conspicuous today at Washington and Lee.

RECONSTRUCTION

During the spring recess a year ago the reconstruction work began. About half of the college plant was to be rebuilt inside and fire-proofed. The need for a better distribution of space, the necessity of strengthening the old buildings before it was too late, and the dramatic example of the Tucker Hall fire made this work imperative. The whole of the central unit—The Main Building and its wings—came under this program as well as part of Newcomb Hall. The stacks of the Library were to be fire-proofed also. Classes were shifted out of the Main Building for the last quarter of the year, and workmen went about their job of dismantling. Scaffolds went up and plaster and timber came down. "Old George" was removed from his lofty pedestal and the whole roof taken off. The Washington College group was completely gutted; then steel girders replaced the wooden beams. All through the summer the work progressed. From outside it was not noticeable for the whole central building was still enmeshed in a network of scaffolding. However, when college opened this fall the rebuilding had been almost completed. The rooms had been entirely rearranged, and what had once been bare wood floors were floors of composition. When a repaired and repainted "George" took his place above the columns late in the fall, the reconstruction had been finished.

PRESIDENT

THE senior becomes the alumnus and finds that with unanticipated emphasis he forgets much and remembers much. Tides of jubilation that surged high about some momentary triumph grow quiescent in long level waters of reality; outlines of ancient tasks, even worthy tasks, are dim in deepening age. But remembrance abides with strange selectivity. The mood of an instant's joyful comradeship, a sudden startling vista of campus loveliness, the recollection of honorable obligations so fulfilled that it carved something on the tablets of self-respect, these persist or at least recur. George Eliot said that finest memory is finest hope. There is peculiar forward-propulsion, peculiar inspiration, in the recollection of richness or nobility long gone. I pray that you carry with you this large estate, this treasure inviolate, a fineness of college memory.

MANY of the members of the Washington and Lee faculty have published important works on their special subjects. President Gaines is recognized by his The Southern Plantation and several studies of Robert E. Lee. Dr. Tucker has prepared significant reports as Chairman of the Industrial Commission of Virginia and as a member of the Virginia Commission on Simplification of State and Local Government. Dr. Shannon's Chaucer and the Roman Poets, published by the Harvard University Press, is a definitive work. To the science of Biology Dr. Hoyt has contributed a work on marine algae. Dr. Helderman has published George Washington, Patron of Learning; Mr. Riegel, Mobilizing for Chaos and Crown of Glory; Mr. Jackson, Early Songs of Uncle Sam. Dr. Bean and many others of the faculty have written articles for scholarly journals. There are several professors at Washington and Lee who have performed a service to education and brought recognition to themselves by publishing textbooks. Dr. Howe, well-known chemist and specialist in radium, has done one on inorganic chemistry, and Dr. Desha has just completed one on organic chemistry. Dr. Bradley is the editor of some French texts, and Mr. Williams has done some editing in Law. These men through their ability both as authors and professors have done much to uphold the academic renown of the University.

General Lee Makes a Decision

On August 4, 1865, General Lee was unanimously elected President of Washington College by the trustees of the institution. The rector of the College, Judge John W. Brockenbrough, who also was a teacher in a private law school in Lexington, was sent to extend the invitation to General Lee, who was taken completely by surprise and promised to consider the offer.

A letter to General Lee from former Governor John Letcher said, "The salary now increased to $1,500 and fees, will provide the means of support in a country like this, where everything is usually abundant and easily to be obtained." By "fees" was indicated the custom of giving to the president one-fifth of each tuition fee; tuition at the time was raised to $75. In addition, General Lee was to receive a house and garden. A president was expected not only to supervise the college, but also to teach philosophy in return for this compensation.

General Lee was probably no more surprised at the invitation extended to him than the trustees of Washington College were at what they had done. It is said that after voting unanimously to offer the presidency to General Lee, they sat for a few minutes as if stunned by their own audacity; they had only acted at all because of a remark which General Lee's daughter, Mary, was supposed to have made—that the people of the South were willing to give her father everything he might need but that no offer had been made of any position in which he could earn a living for himself and his family.

Their institution was barely alive after the war. When General Hunter and his troops entered Lexington, in 1864, destroying the buildings of V. M. I. and the homes of the officers there, it was only by pleading that Washington College was not a state institution and that nothing could be accomplished by destroying it, that it was possible to save the college. Nevertheless, great damage was done to the buildings, and the books from the library were scattered far and wide. In 1865 some of the buildings were not inhabitable; the Federal garrison occupied others; part of the campus was under cultivation.

Prospects for the coming session were extremely gloomy. During the summer the faculty, consisting of only four professors, was authorized by the Board of Trustees to borrow money in order to repair the buildings. To add to the difficulties, there were few who had the money to go to college at this particular time.

A friend of General Lee's, an Episcopal clergyman, was distressed to think that the General would even consider accepting the presidency of such an inconspicuous college, when there were institutions of importance which would be glad to have him as their head. General Lee considered the proposal favorably, however, and on August 24 he wrote his conditional acceptance to the trustees, in which he said:

". . . Fully impressed with the responsibilities of the office, I have feared that I should be unable to discharge its duties to the satisfaction of the trustees or to the benefit of the Country. The proper education of youth requires not only great ability, but I fear more strength than I now possess, for I do not feel able to undergo the labour of conducting classes in regular courses of instruction. I could not, therefore, undertake more than the general administration and supervision of the institution. There is another subject which has caused me serious reflection, and is, I think, worthy of the consideration of the Board. Being excluded from the terms of amnesty in the proclamation of the President of the United States, of the 29th of May last, and an object of censure to a portion of the Country, I have thought it probable that my occupation of the position of President might draw upon the College a feeling of hostility; and I should, therefore, cause injury to an Institution which it would be my highest interest to advance. . . .

"Should you, however, take a different view, and think that my services in the position tendered to me by the Board will be advantageous to the College and Country, I will yield to your judgment and accept it; otherwise I most respectfully decline the office."

The trustees indeed did "take a different view," and, relieving him of classroom duty, settled the question of General Lee's future.

BOOK TWO · · THE CLASSES

From the mid-west, the heart of America, over the same territory first explored by Meriwether Lewis and other early graduates of Augusta Academy, come many boys to Washington and Lee. Nearly one hundred years after the explorations of Lewis and Clark, in the 1850's, came the great influx of settlers into the West. By covered wagon they went, along rugged roads beaten through plain and valley, impelled by the vision of wealth and power which lay before them. Today their scions come back to this school of their forefathers, filled with the free, ever-dauntless spirit of the West.

THE MID-WEST

The President's House

At Christmas, 1867, General Lee had been president of the College for a little more than two years, living in the house now occupied by Dr. Shannon. The increase in the student body and consequently the demand for more professors required more homes. The trustees decided to build a new house for General Lee and to assign his present residence to one of the professors. An appropriation of $12,000 was made, which was later increased to $15,000, and General Lee was authorized to build according to a plan of his own selection. He took a keen interest in this matter, and at once commenced designing a new "President's House."

An old frame house stood on the site selected. This house is said to have been built by William Alexander, father of Archibald Alexander, first President of Princeton Theological Seminary. Since the burning of the professor's houses at V. M. I. this house had been occupied by Colonel Williamson and his family. Dean Harry Campbell said this house was moved bodily to "Green Hill," overlooking the V. M. I. athletic field, where it still stands.

At Christmas, 1868, a year after the house was first planned, Captain R. E. Lee, Jr., writes: "The new house was approaching completion, and my father was much interested in the work, going there very often and discussing with the workmen their methods. That Christmas I spent two weeks in Lexington, and many times my father took me all over the new building, explaining all the details of the plan."

In March, 1869, General Lee writes: "I had hoped to get down this spring, but I fear the dilatoriness of the workmen in finishing the house, and the necessity of my attending to it, getting the grounds inclosed and preparing the garden, will prevent me. I shall also have to superintend the moving."

In May, 1869, the house was ready. Mrs. Lee, who was an invalid and had to be lifted whenever she moved, had a room on the first floor, and the veranda was extended around three sides of the house because of her pleasure in being outdoor in her wheel-chair.

Captain Lee says: "This she enjoyed immensely, for she was very fond of the open air, and one could see her there eve y bright day with 'Mrs. Ruffner,' a much petted cat, sitting on her shoulder or cradled in her lap. My father's favorite seat was in a deep window of the dining-room, from which his eyes could rest on rolling fields of grass and grain, bounded by the ever-changing mountains. There was a new stable for 'Traveler' and his companion, 'Lucy Long,' a cow-house, wood-shed, garden and yard, all planned out and built by my father."

NAMES . . .

General Lee was the man who showed Mr. Mattingly how. Once a new student entered the General's office, where, to his surprise, he was greeted by name. General Lee had met the boy, along with a host of others, at a reception in Baltimore.

GRADES . . .

Not only did he remember the names and faces of his students, but General Lee also knew the exact numerical standing of many of them. To a visitor who was inquiring about a certain boy he said: "He is a very quiet, orderly young man, but seems very careful not to injure the health of his father's son. He got last month only forty on his Greek, thirty-five on his Mathematics, forty-seven on his Latin, and fifty on his English, which is a very low stand, as 100 is maximum. Now, I do not want our young men to injure their health; but I wish them to come as near it as possible."

THE ARMY . . .

General Lee believed that the discipline of military education was not the best to fit men for the duties of citizenship. "As a general principle," he said, "you should not force young men to do their duty, but let them do it voluntarily and thereby develop their characters. The great mistake of my life was taking a military education." He also said, "For many years I have observed the failure in business pursuits of men who have resigned from the army. It is very rare that any one of them has achieved success."

Whenever, as happened upon certain occasions, the faculty and students of Washington College assembled, with the Corps and Staff of V. M. I., General Lee never kept in step with the beat of the drum.

AMBITION . . .

The student body of Washington College when General Lee was president was more diversified than we usually imagine. There were boys and there were bearded veterans of General Lee's own campaigns. There were the wealthy who only tolerated college because it gave them opportunity to hunt the fox in the hills near Lexington, and there were the serious-minded who came to college in poverty. The story is told of one youth who walked to Lexington all the way from Alabama, bringing with him all the resources which his family could muster up for his schooling—three hundred dollars and his father's gold watch. General Lee almost wept when the new student told him of his hopes for the future, and he provided cheap living expenses for the boy and work during the summer vacation.

LOCK-OUT . . .

When General Lee was president of Washington College, Christmas vacation amounted to one or two days. At one time the students threatened to cut classes if they were not given a longer vacation; General Lee warned them that if they did so, he would close the school, and the strike did not occur.

SMART BOY . . .

"This young man is going to graduate in one year," said General Lee in introducing a cocksure new student to a professor. The boy corrected the General; it was two years, not one. "Ah," said General Lee, "he has concluded to postpone it for a session. Well, sir, I wish you the full realization of your hopes; but I must tell you that you will have no time to play baseball."

STUDENT UNION BUILDING

BOOK THREE · · ACTIVITIES

In the far west, the last outpost of the pioneer spirit in America, the name of Washington and Lee signifies the American tradition at its best. Lured by visions of sudden wealth, thousands of prospectors hurried westward in '49, spent long days panning the streams for glints of gold, and disappointed, turned to other pursuits. Today, out of the beautiful regions of the far west, come descendants of these pioneers to Washington and Lee, in constantly increasing numbers as the years go by.

The Road to Lexington

When Dr. Gaines was elected to the presidency of Washington and Lee University in 1930, he and his family made the two hundred mile trip from Wake Forest, North Carolina, to Lexington, in six hours. His furniture and household belongings were loaded into vans on Friday morning, reaching Lexington Friday afternoon.

Sixty-five years before, Washington and Lee's new president found the road to Lexington far more circuitous. General Lee was elected president of Washington College on August 4, 1865. On September 15, he started for Lexington on Traveller, traveling alone, since accommodations had not yet been arranged for Mrs. Lee and his daughters. It was one hundred and eight miles from Derwent to Lexington, and it took General Lee, riding in oppressive late-summer weather, four days to make the journey.

It was not until December 2, however, that General Lee's wife and daughters arrived in Lexington. They had been occupying a small cottage at Derwent on the estate of Mrs. Elizabeth Randolph Cocke on the James River Canal about fifteen miles from Richmond. The house in Lexington assigned to the Lee family had been rented to a Dr. Madison; and as there was some contention about the lease, use of the new president's house could not be gained immediately.

Late in the autumn the college got possession of the house, which General Lee said was in "wretched condition." The women of Lexington enthusiastically undertook to prepare the house for Mrs. Lee's arrival.

Meanwhile many letters passed between General Lee and his wife relative to the journey. At this time the packet boat from Lynchburg to Lexington, via the James River and Kanawha Canal, was the easiest way to reach Lexington from the outside world. It was indeed the only way, except by stage from Goshen, twenty-two miles away, a station of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad.

On the morning of December 2, 1865, General Lee welcomed his family at the packet landing near East Lexington, about a mile and a quarter from town. They arrived aboard the private boat of the president of the canal company. Captain Robert E. Lee, Jr., who accompanied his mother and sisters, describes their arrival in Lexington as follows:

"My father, on Traveller, was there to meet us, and, putting us all in a carriage, escorted us to our new home. On arriving, we found waiting us a delicious breakfast sent by Mrs. Nelson, the wife of Professor Nelson. The house was in good order—thanks to the ladies of Lexington—but rather bare of furniture, except my mother's rooms. Mrs. Cocke had completely furnished them, and her loving thoughtfulness had not forgotten the smallest detail. Mrs. Margaret J. Preston, the talented and well-known poetess, had drawn the designs for the furniture, and a one-armed Confederate soldier had made it all. A handsomely carved grand piano, presented by Stief, the famous maker of Baltimore, stood alone in the parlour. The floors were covered with the carpets rescued from Arlington—much too large and folded under to suit the reduced size of the rooms. Some of the bedrooms were partially furnished, and the dining room had enough in it to make us comfortable. We were all very grateful and happy—glad to get home—the only one we had had for four long years."

DOREMUS GYMNASIUM

BOOK FOUR · · ATHLETICS

Not long after the Cavaliers set foot on Jamestown island, the doughty Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock. Other settlers came too, and before many years a thriving "New England" had developed. Today New England is famed for its immaculate beauty, its prosperity, its good government, its educational system. It is indeed a tribute to Washington and Lee that every year New England sends some of her sons to be educated at this "most cosmopolitan school in the country."

THE FOOTBALL SEASON

Four victories and five defeats does not give an adequate picture of Washington and Lee's grid season. Three of the five defeats came at the hands of high national ranking teams—Duke, Army, and Kentucky. West Virginia's jinx team and Maryland accounted for the other two losses. However, the Big Blue team did succeed in recapturing the state crown from V. P. I., ending up the season with victories over Virginia, V. P. I., and William and Mary in state competition. In the conference the 1934 champs finished higher than 10 other schools.

Three men gained places on the all-State team—Captain Duane Berry at guard, Wilton Sample at fullback, and Frank Jones at end. Preston Moore and Joe Oschie rated positions on the second team. Berry landed a position on the second team in the all-Conference selections.

Opening the season against Elon in Lexington on September 26, the Generals showed their strength by downing 27-0 the North Carolina team that had dropped a close game to N. C. state the week previous. Wilton Sample, hard-charging fullback, carried the ball for the first tally of the 1936 season and before the day was over had added another touchdown besides booting two extra points. Pres Moore and Sophomore Chubby Howard scored the other two markers.

With Monk Meyer accounting for three touchdowns, the Army eleven trounced W. and L., 28-0, the following week at West Point before 10,000. A fumbled punt early in the first quarter gave the Generals a chance to score, but the Army team held on the 10-yard line, and then promptly marched down the field to push across the first of four touchdowns. A desperate passing attack in the second half, Carson to Spessard, netted several long gains to make a total of better than 200 yards gained in the air.

Again the West Virginia jinx team came through with a victory—this time by a 28-7 score in Charleston. Kelley Maon's passes paved the way to the Big Blue's downfall. Joe Oschie's recovered fumble coupled with Craft's passes to Brasher put the ball deep in West Virginia territory. Pres Moore scored early in the first quarter going over tackle after two line bucks had failed. Isaac's dash around end and Maon's pass to Lorenz gave the Mountaineers a 13-7 lead at the half. Maon figured in both the other touchdowns, scoring one through center and passing to Isaac for the other.

On October 16 the Kentucky Wildcats came to town and left with a decisive 39-7 victory. With Bob Davis leading the way, the K. U. team jumped into the lead at the half, 14-0. In the fourth quarter the Fightin' Generals came back and scored after a sustained drive with Sample going over. Not to be outdone the Wildcats came back to score their sixth touchdown of the day.

Sophomores Bill Borries and Don Dunlap ruined Virginia's homecoming festivities in leading the Generals to a 13-0 victory over the favored Wahoos. Both touchdowns came in the second period. Borries intercepted a pass and raced 25 yards for a score. Dunlap breezed around end later in the quarter to keep the Blue's record over Virginia clean for six years straight.

The Generals invaded Richmond the next week only to be turned back by Duke, 51-0, in a game that marked the low ebb of the season. Ace Parker, Honey Hackney, and Bob O'Mara went wild against W. and L. and pushed over eight touchdowns. The Generals were no match for the powerful Blue Devils, who later took the conference title.

V. P. I. met the Generals on homecoming and W. and L. emerged the victor, 27-0. Sample accounted for two touchdowns while Moore and Dunlap made one apiece. Moore scored after a 35 yard dash, while Dunlap ran back a punt 59 yards to tally.

Washington and Lee journeyed to Norfolk to meet William and Mary and clinched the state title by defeating the Indians, 13-7. Taking the ball on the Indians 22 yard line, the Tilson team marched to a touchdown with Sample going over from the one-foot line. Faking a placement, Dunlap passed to Borries for the extra point. Midway in the second period the William and Mary eleven uncorked an attack, which brought a touchdown with Dozier passing to Kyle for the score. The score stood seven all at the half. Moore scored the winning touchdown in the last period after a short sustained drive.

The season was concluded with a Thanksgiving Day battle against Maryland in Baltimore. After being held for two and a half quarters, the Old Liners won out 19-6. W. and L. got the jump in the opening minutes of play and scored. Dunlap picked out Frank Jones all alone in the end zone for a 16 yard gain and a score. Bill Guckeyson, all-conference back, started the Maryland attack. Ellinger, Terp quarterback, bucked the line for a score in the second period. The Terps took the lead at the half when Ellinger went over from the 16 yard line. Later in the game he rammed over tackle for his third touchdown of the day.

COACH "TEX" TILSON

Tex Tilson: star tackle on Washington and Lee football teams from 1922-25; captaining the team in 1924 and the wrestling team in 1925; line coach at Duke as well as wrestling and boxing coach from 1926-31; assistant football coach at W. & L. until 1933 at which time he became head coach and was the boxing coach until that sport was dropped; has given W. & L. three state championships in four years; in 1934 put out the only Blue team to win the Southern Conference title.

SOUTHERN CONFERENCE CHAMPIONS--STATE CHAMPIONS

CAPTAIN NORMAN ILER

Captain Norman Perry Iler made in four years of competition one of the most outstanding records ever to be achieved at Washington and Lee. He was placed on the all-state and all-Southern Conference Teams on each of his three years of varsity competition. According to sports writers, Iler is one of the most consistent guards, both offensively and defensively, in the entire conference.

BASKETBALL SEASON

Persistency was rewarded in the Southern Conference Basketball tournament as the Blue Comets of Washington and Lee captured the conference title after losing in the finals for two straight years to the White Phantoms of North Carolina University. Team coordination and spirit were present during the entire season, particularly in the conference tournament at Raleigh.

The record for the year showed sixteen victories and three defeats. The Generals split games with Richmond and Duke, losing both games away from Lexington. Long Island University was responsible for the other defeat. L. I. U., recognized as one of the best teams in the country, caught W. and L. off guard with Bob Spessard in the hospital and Bill Borries suffering from a lingering cold.

Three Generals were placed on the All-Conference team. Captain Norman Iler was put at a guard position for the third year in a row. Bob Spessard was named at center for the second year in succession. Kit Carson was the third W. and L. man to be named to the team. The same three made the All-State team.

In three preliminary games before Christmas, Cy Young's team took two out of three, defeating the Roanoke Scrappers, 72-22, and Bridgewater College, 64-19, and losing to Roanoke Business College, 48-34. The team dusted off Elon and then got going in the conference. The score of the game was 43-26. The Blue Comets met Maryland in the first battle in the conference and took an easy 51-27 victory. Spessard tallied 25 points.

Playing without the services of Bob Spessard, the W. and L. cagers just managed to take a close tilt from the Wahoos of Virginia. Bill Borries, who replaced Spessard at center, led the way with half a dozen field goals and one foul shot. Again without Spessard's services, the team traveled to New York to play in Madison Square Garden against the highly touted Long Island University five only to lose, 44-28. Shortly after the beginning of the second half, Iler left the game on fouls and Borries collapsed on the floor because of a lingering illness.

With the second team in, the Generals were no match for L. I. U. Continuing to set the pace in the conference, the Big Blue five trounced Virginia Tech, 52-30. For the first time in three weeks Coach Cy Young was able to put the front line of his fighting Generals on the floor. Spessard scored 21 points.

The Generals were pushed to the limit to stop a powerful threat from the Red Terrors of N. C. State, 27-26. After the usual forty minutes of playing time the score was knotted at 24-all. Iler put the Blue five out in front with a field goal. Spessard counted on a foul to widen the margin to three points. A N. C. State basket nearly tied up the game, the whistle blew with W. and L. one point to the good. Two days later the Blue Comets were again at top speed and had a relatively easy time with Virginia Tech in a return game, 38-24. Carol Shocky, center for V. P. I. and captain elect for next years Blacksburg football team, had a difficult time keeping Spessard in check. But even with Shocky guarding him like a hawk, Spessard managed to break away enough to give Cy Young's team a comparatively easy victory.

The Generals Playing Long Island University in Madison Square Garden

Washington and Lee suffered their first Southern Conference defeat when an inspired Duke team upset the conference leaders on the Blue Devils court, 37-35. A strong Duke defense in the second half changed a 23-19 lead at the half into a two point defeat. Spessard broke away from Herrick, the Duke center, to bucket the ball seven times and also dropped in two foul shots. In the final stages of the game after the lead had changed hands several times Duke took a two point lead on Podger's long shot and froze the ball until the end of the game.

The Spiders of Richmond University were the Seventh conference victim for the Washington and Lee Generals. The score was 37-20. The Blue Comets were in form and they took a six point lead at the offset. Richmond closed the gap, but Fielden Woodward started hitting away to make the score 10-6. At the intermission the Lexington team held a six point margin. Two free throws, and a field goal brought the Spiders within striking distance. Here Frazier came into the game and started a spurt which accounted for four field goals for Spessard, three for Carson, and two for Iler.

RICHMOND GAME

The Generals moved a notch nearer the state crown by scoring an impressive 50-22 victory. Kit Carson launched a devastating attack, contributing a pair of baskets far out on the floor. Spessard ran up a total of 21 points for the evening.

Evening the count with Duke, W. and L. hit full stride and downed the Blue Devils, 37-31, on the local court. Duke assumed the lead first and were four points to the good as the teams left the floor for the intermission. Sixteen points from the hand of Bob Spessard told a large portion of the Generals' second half spree, which netted 24 points.

Nine points by Bob Spessard in the last five minutes of play was the margin by which W. and L. swept to their tenth conference victory. Maryland was the victim of a 41-35 defeat. For fifteen minutes of the second half it appeared as if the Terps might turn back the Blue five as they scored 17 points while holding the Generals to 9 and held a 32-31 advantage.

Reaching a peak for the regular playing season, the Generals downed their arch basketball rivals, North Carolina University, 29-19, in what Cy Young called the best defensive game he had ever seen. The Blue's lead was never threatened except in the opening minutes of play. As an anti-climax to the regular playing season, the Blue team went down to defeat for the third time of the season, losing to the Spiders, 33-30. Green, the Richmond center, turned in his best game of the season, holding Spessard to 10 points while he marked up 15 for himself.

At the annual tournament at Raleigh, Washington and Lee was given the number one seeded position in the drawings and remained the top heavy favorite all during the tournament. A second half rally gave the Blue five their first victory in the tourney over the Gamecocks of South Carolina, 42-22. The rally which brought victory to the Blue and White five began five minutes after the start of the second half when South Carolina had pulled within three points of the lead. A rally good for nineteen points gave W. and L. a substantial lead.

In the semi-finals the Washington and Lee quintet met N. C. State for the second time of the year and won the second time by a 27-23 count. Starting after the half with the score tied 14-14, Iler and Spessard launched a spurt that brought victory.

Meeting North Carolina for the third consecutive year in the finals the Generals finally overcame the White Phantom jinx and scored a 44-33 triumph. Once again it was Bob Spessard who came to the front, scoring 25 points during the game. The game was not unlike the first meeting of the teams two weeks previous in that W. and L. never lost the lead. At the half the score was 23-16. Late in the second half the White Phantoms started a rally, which the losers had carried through the year before to go on to the championship, but they were unable to overtake the determined team from Lexington.

THE SEASON IN RETROSPECT

Even though the Southern Conference wrestling tournament was called off because it was too much of a Washington and Lee-V. M. I. affair in recent years, the title still remained in Lexington with both colleges in town claiming the crown. Both W. and L. and V. M. I. were undefeated in Southern Conference competition, each having four victories. The Blue and White mat team downed North Carolina, Duke, N. C. State, and Virginia Tech to maintain an unblemished record in the conference.

Waynesburg and Princeton provided the only non-conference competition. The Pennsylvania College was the first opponent of the year and they turned out to be an easy victory for the Generals of Washington and Lee. The Princeton meet was far from a fitting climax to a successful season. The Nassau wrestling team, undefeated in strong eastern intercollegiate circles, had little difficulty mastering the Lexington squad.

Captain Carl Arenz, Southern Conference Champion of the year before in the 155-pound class, won five out of six of his matches. His lone defeat came when he was fighting out of his class against Williams of North Carolina, who came up from underneath and took the W. and L. captain by surprise. In the final bout of his collegiate career Arenz met Charley Powers of the Princeton Tiger, a man whom he had wrestled twice before in prep school; each held a victory before that meet. After ten minutes of wrestling, Powers had only a few seconds time advantage, and the match went into extra periods before Arenz won.

Opening the season the Generals took an easy win from Waynesburg College of Pennsylvania, 22-6. Jack Evans in the 118-pound class staged a great fight to down McGrane in extra periods. Bob Kemp took the measure of Bud Allison, a former W. and L. student, without much difficulty. With this lead the Lexington team had no trouble taking four of the remaining six bouts to win the match.

North Carolina University was the next invader and they left town after the Blue team had taken a close 17-15 decision. Evans put the Generals in the lead by winning his match with a large time advantage. Bob Kemp surprised the Carolinians by pinning their captain, Umstead. George McInerney and Chester Shively gave the home team a commanding advantage by winning their matches by time advantages. Charlie Lykes settled the issue by rolling up a 6:50 minute time advantage.

The week-end after exams the team took to the road and invaded Duke and North Carolina State. The Generals blanked Duke for the second year in a row with a 32-0 score. The Blue Devil matmen lacked the polish of

Coach Archie Mathis' boys and did not offer the visitors any serious competition. Kemp and Lowry won their bouts by falls, while Eaton, Thomas, Arenz, and Shively won by time advantages. Duke forfeited in both the 175-pound class and in the unlimited division. Moving over to N. C. State the next night the team met more serious opposition. W. and L. won, however, by a 17-9 margin. Bob Kemp lost his first intercollegiate wrestling bout to Bell. Bell held a time advantage of over five minutes when the bout ended. Eaton took the only fall for W. and L. in a little over six minutes. Lowry, Thomas, and Arenz took the next three bouts to assure W. and L. a win.

Coach Archie Mathis' team journeyed to Blacksburg where they administered a 28-0 shutout. Charlie Eaton and Calvert Thomas each scored falls while Evans, Kemp, Arenz, Shively, Lykes, and Oschie took time advantages.

W. and L.'s wrestlers met their only defeat of the season when the undefeated Princeton Tigers rode over them with three falls and three time advantages to win 24-6 in the Princeton gymnasium. For the Generals Kemp and Arenz were the only victors, Kemp winning on a time advantage and Arenz on a referee's decision in an extra period. Eaton lost his chance to win when he was called for forcing his opponent's arm too far back. A bar and chancery hold got the best of Lowry after over seven minutes of wrestling. Thomas accidentally fell into a head lock. Even though Chester Shively did lose his bout, he gave the Princeton captain a hard fight. Lykes lost by a time advantage while Toll, football captain-elect of Princeton, pinned Joe Oschie.

CAPTAIN "DICK" SMITH

Richard A. Smith: known to all followers of W. and L. baseball teams as Captain Dick; varsity second baseman at Washington and Lee for three years, acting as captain in 1911; was Graduate Manager of Athletics at Fishburne M. A. until 1921 when he took over the same job at W. and L.; became head baseball coach in 1923 after acting as assistant coach for one year; besides putting out many great baseball teams, Captain Dick has developed stellar basketball teams while he was coach of that sport from 1926-30; probably his hardest and least noted work is done behind his desk where he arranges the schedules for all Big Blue Athletic teams; sees that the athletic equipment is kept in good shape.

Captain Dick's baseball team failed to retain the Southern Conference Championship last spring, ending up the season with a record of nine victories against thirteen defeats. Persistent injuries prevented the team from reaching their peak, particularly in the catching department.

Captain Joe Pette and Captain-elect Emerson Dickman were both recognized as two of the best pitchers in intercollegiate baseball in this part of the country. Proof of this can be found in the fact that Dickman signed up with the Boston Red Sox at the close of last season, while Pette played professional ball with a New Jersey Club.

With the loss of his two hurlers, Captain Dick has the problem of replacing Dickman and Pette and building up a pitching staff. The pitching staff for this year consists of Roy Dart, outstanding sophomore ace, Mike Tomlin, who left his place behind the plate to take over pitching duties, Frank O'Conner, and Charley Skinner, the only returning pitchers from last year's team.' Frank Frazier, Bob Watt, Norm Iler, Johnny Dill, and Al Davis have been working out in the infield this spring. The team boasts a veteran outfield consisting of Mickey Cochran, Pres Moore, and Max Breckinridge. Don Dunlap, captain of last year's freshman team, has taken over the catching job.

Opening the season the Generals split games with Ohio State. State took the first 2-0 and W. & L. won the second, 7-4. Pette pounded out a homer to win the second game. The following week the team went on the spring trip and won three out of five games. The Generals divided games with William and Mary, losing the first, 14-2, and winning the second, 9-4. Dickman's trip coupled with Pette's pitching were outstanding in the second game. With Skinner and Jones sharing the pitching assignment the team dropped a close game to Randolph-Macon, 7-6. Going to Richmond the team took both games of the series. Dickman held the Spiders in check to win, 6-0, and Pette won his game, 7-4.

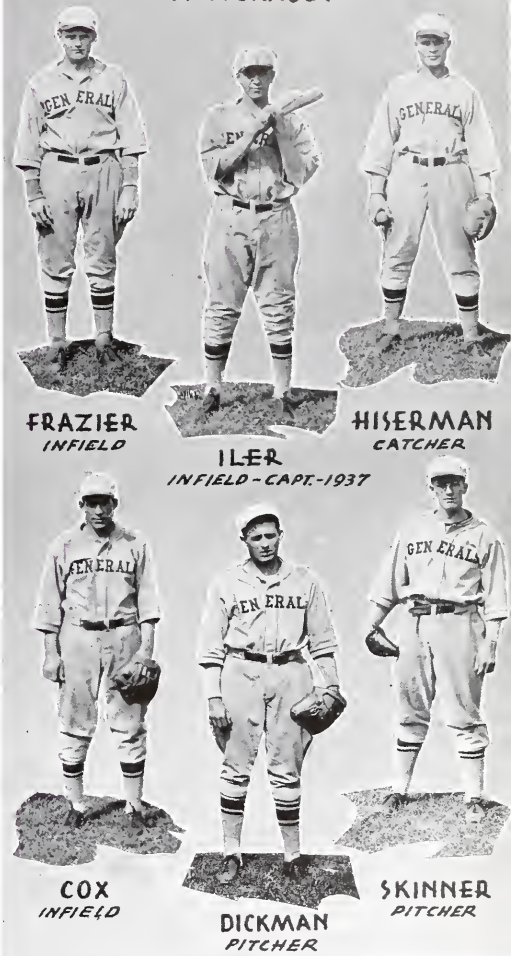
CY YOUNG GIVES HIS FRESHMEN A WORKOUT



The William and Mary Indians traveled to Lexington to win both ends of a two game series. The Indians won the first, 12-7, and took a close decision in the second, 2-0. Five costly errors in the first game and a five run scoring spree in the ninth inning of the second game cinched the victories for W. and M. Moving over to Charlottesville on April 18 the team hung up the fifth victory of the season, taming the Wahoos, 5-3. Dickman's hurling and hitting polished off the U. of Va. team.

After downing North Carolina, 9-8, in an exciting ten inning game featured by Dickman's triple in the tenth, the Generals evened up the count with the University of Richmond by losing both games in the series to them here in Lexington. The Generals were defeated, 10-0, in the first game and dropped the second game, 8-4, in spite of Chip Jones' home run.

The next four games were played with V. P. I., two being played in Blacksburg, and two in Lexington. The Generals lost the first two, 4-1, and 4-3. In Lexington the teams split games with the Gobblers. Earl Lake took the best of Dickman in a pitching duel to give his team a 2-0 victory while Pette pitched almost perfect ball to shut out the Tech nine, 5-0, the next day.

Starting off on the final trip of the season Washington and Lee traveled to Georgetown University to drop a 6-2 decision. The fourth inning spoiled Captain Joe Pette's day, as the Hoyas pushed over five runs on a walk, a wild pitch, and three hits. The next day Captain Dick's ball club lost an eleven inning game to Maryland, 8-7. Norman Iler with two doubles and two singles paced the Generals attack in the Maryland game.

Washington and Lee finished off the season by decisively defeating Navy, 17-6. The Generals took an early lead by putting across eight runs in the first two innings of the game. Frank Frazier showed batting potentialities by walloping the ball into the left field stands in the first of the seventh with two men on the bases.

BATTING AVERAGES

Norman Iler, star second baseman, took the individual batting honors for last spring with a .326 average. He hit safely thirty-one times in ninety-five trips to the plate.

Competition for the second position was exceptionally close. Layton Cox went into second place in the last game of the season to post an .32098 average as compared with Emerson Dickman's .32051 average. Dickman pressed Iler for the top position for the most of the season, while Cox was in third place for the large portion of the season.

Preston Moore showed the greatest single improvement of the year. A little over two weeks before the season closed Moore had an average of .204. In the last five games Moore paced the team's attack with a .417 average to come up from seventh to fourth place. His average for the year was .294.

A RESUME OF THE SEASON

Even though the Washington and Lee track team failed to win a single individual meet or to place high in either the state or conference meet, several individual stars gained widespread recognition for the Generals cinder team. Jim Rogers, sophomore star, set a new record in the 120 yard high hurdles in the state meet at 14.8 and then the week later took the same event in the Southern Conference meet. Rogers won the right to compete in the Olympic semi-final try-outs in Chicago in June. He did remarkably well in the meet, but fell by the wayside when Forrest Townes, who later won the Olympic championship, took the event.

The outlook for the present year is more promising than it has been in several years with the state championship freshmen team coming up to the varsity. Flash Harvey, middle distance man, Hartsill Ragon, miler, Stuart Allen, dash man, and Bob Nicholson, broad jumper, all show promise of becoming outstanding men on Coach Forrest Fletcher's varsity track team. Coupled with the men returning from last year's varsity, the team should be one of the best rounded teams that the school has had in some time. Co-Captains for this year are Charlie Brasher and Bob Kingsbury, who are outstanding men in their events. Grover Batten, who was out of school for a year, Charlie Prater, Harvey, Kingsbury, and Edwards make up the distance men. Skarda and Allen will represent the team in the dashes. Brasher, Borries, Spessard, and Berry are the representatives in the track events.

In the first meet of last year on April 11 a strong Maryland squad downed Washington and Lee by a decisive 87-39 score. Jim Rogers and Bill Higgins were the leading point scorers for the Generals, each taking a first and a second for a total of eight points. Charlie Brasher also counted a first place for the Blue and White with a discus throw of 117 feet 4½ inches.

The next week the Blue Devils of Duke University easily trounced the Generals, 88-38. Mason Sheehan of Duke pulled up in the 100 yard dash to finish in a dead heat with his teammate Harold Woodward in 9.7 seconds. Rogers, who won both hurdle events and Kingsbury, who won the half mile in 2:03 scored W. and L.'s only firsts.

Traveling to Richmond the following week the team fell before the Spider track team, 75-51. Tubby Owings took the spotlight for the day, bettering the record for both Washington and Lee and Richmond. He pushed the shot put 44 feet and 6 inches. W. and L.'s biggest bid for victory came when Ajax Browning, Vance Funk, and Dave Wharton finished one-two-three in the quarter mile. The only other Blue and White firsts were hung up by Jim Rogers in the high hurdles and Warren Edwards in the two mile event.

On May 2 on Wilson Field Virginia Tech's track team won 73 1-3 to 53 2-3. For W. and L. it was a new star who almost turned the tide in the Generals' favor. Duane Berry tossed the javelin 170 feet while only two feet behind was Tom Berry, another W. and L. man. Jim Rogers turned in two first places, Tubby Owings won the shot put, and Warren Edwards came through in the grilling two mile run.

Virginia again took the state meet with W. and L. placing fourth. Jim Rogers set a new record in the high hurdles with a time of 14.9 seconds. Tubby Owings in the shot was the only other man to take a first. Captain Price Davis placed in the mile run. In the Southern Conference meet at Duke, W. and L. finished far down the line with only five points. Jim Rogers again took the high hurdles, but his time was three-tenths of a second slower than in the state meet.

After running their string of dual victories to forty-seven, the Generals Swimming team climaxed a banner season by annexing their third straight Southern Conference Swimming Crown.

With Jim Griffin, star sophomore of the year before not competing, Cy Twombly paced the burden of the dash events on the shoulders of Gil Meem, free style artist, who remained undefeated in competition and won conference titles in the 220 and 440 events. Paul Lavietes showed the way to conference backstrokers for the second straight year. The medley team of Lavietes, Taylor, and Wagner repeated their triumph for the second year straight in this event.

Co-captains Ad Wagner and Joe Taylor were consistent point getters in the free style and breast events, respectively, and Charlie Brasher, last year's captain, was a constant threat in the free style events.

LEE CHAPEL FROM WASHINGTON HALL

BOOK FIVE . . FEATURES

In 1623 a boatload of Hollanders sailed up the Hudson river, chose a wooded island for a settlement, and bought it from the Indians for $24. Thus New Amsterdam was born, later to become the metropolis of New York. From New York and its neighboring cities there later came to Washington College and the University generous benefactions, the gifts of such men as Andrew Carnegie, Thomas A. Scott, Vincent L. Bradford, and most recently, Robert Parker Doremus. Finally, the Eastern states have given Washington and Lee many of their finest youths, and today over one third of the student body of the University hales from this Middle Atlantic area.

DID YOU KNOW . . . .

Fifty thousand people representing forty-eight states and a score of foreign countries visit Lee Chapel every year, adding a cosmopolitan touch to our campus.

A century ago firearms were excluded from the grounds of Washington College, no duel could be fought, and "wine, ardent spirits, and gun powder" were strictly forbidden. No student could enter a "tippling house without permission from some member of the faculty."

"Old George," who adorns the bell-tower of Washington Hall, was carved in 1842 by Captain Mathew S. Kahle, Lexington cabinet maker, whose compensation for his work was less than $100. His material consisted of a pine log, a broad-axe, a fast-adze, and chisel.

Washington and Lee ranks the seventh oldest of the 680 colleges and universities in the United States.

Two famous honorary fraternities, Omicron Delta Kappa and Tau Kappa Iota, were founded on the Washington and Lee campus.

Washington and Lee is the only school in the United States authorized by George Washington to bear his name.

Did You Know—

RUINS OF LIBERTY HALL

Washington and Lee is the most cosmopolitan school in the country, followed by Dartmouth and Sweet Briar.

Harvard University once gave Washington and Lee $1,000 as a contribution to its endowment.

Dr. George Junkin, president of this university from 1848 to 1861, founded Lafayette College in Pennsylvania and Miami University in Ohio. He resigned as head of Washington College in 1861 due to Union sympathies.

The tuition fee at Washington College was raised to $25 in 1806. At the same time the salary of the rector was increased to $300.

Until 1813 there was no president of this institution; instead, the chief official was the rector.

The total expenses for Washington College in 1860 were only $55 with an extra $5 fee for a modern language.

Room rent for a senior at Washington College was $2 in 1825.

In 1821, tuition at Washington College for five months was $15. Board was $8 per month.

At one time the students of Washington College were compelled to get up at 5:00 o'clock in the morning.

Before 1850 students were compelled to attend church on Sunday.

There were only six men on the faculty of Washington College in 1839.

Mock Republican Convention

Late last spring we had our national convention for the party out of power, as is the custom every four years. A Republican convention in Lexington is rather ironical and for the first time in years we picked the wrong candidate, letting Vandenburg get the nomination over Landon. The cosmopolitanism of the school was indicated most convincingly by allowing the students to represent, as delegates, their home states in so far as was possible. 1. In portraying a Kentucky colonel, Joe Arnold had a very good excuse for keeping a mint julep in hand. . . . 2. The speaker's platform. . . . 3. Appreciation

I want to express here my sincere appreciation to certain people who have aided through work or consultation in the presentation of this book. Leonard Glover, of the Lynchburg Engraving Company, as an alumnus and friend of Washington and Lee, proved invaluable in his assistance. His patience with the editor during periods of mental anguish is most appreciated. Bill Daniel, who serviced the book for the printing company, showed a keen interest in its preparation and a genuine devotion to the University. Andy McClung and the personnel of his studio were ever willing to cooperate and furnish pictures on short notice and under the most trying circumstances. John DeGroot, Richmond artist, deserves a great deal of praise for his realistic etchings of the school for which he made a special trip to Lexington in order to get the true atmosphere. A Philadelphia artist, W. L. Roach, is responsible for the drawings depicting the five sections of the country, and his job speaks for itself. H. F. Beckett, representative of the David J. Molloy Plant in Chicago designed the covers and was able to portray the theme precisely as desired. We also wish to thank Robert Benson who handled all the manuscript copy at the Nashville office of the Benson Printing Company. We are grateful to McClelland Barclay, the Cosmopolitan Magazine artist, for consenting to judge our beauty section.

Even these men who are responsible for the CALYX denote cosmopolitanism—the engraving done in Lynchburg, the book serviced in Washington, the photography done in Lexington, the etchings made in Richmond, the artist's drawings in Philadelphia, the beauty section selected in New York, the covers made in Chicago, and finally the book printed in Nashville with nine hundred and twenty-five copies distributed throughout the country.

On our campus there are a number of people who aided directly and indirectly in our preparation of the 1937 CALYX. The snapshot section took much mental and physical labor, and I sincerely wish to thank all who have contributed to it, especially Bob Dementi, Andy McClung, Professor Riegel, Jack Neil, and Barclay Dillion for their willingness to cooperate. We also express appreciation to Mr. Earl S. Mattingly for his abundant statistical information. The Misses Elizabeth and Mary Barclay rendered especial aid to the editor in times of discouragement. I also wish to thank Dr. Gaines, Dr. Tucker, Dr. Shannon, and Mrs. Margaret Graham Lee for their encouragement. Parke Rouse has shown tremendous interest in the preparation of the book and was most helpful in gathering the first collection of portraits of all the presidents of Washington and Lee. Joe Haselden, Bill Karraker, Ben Anderson, Bob Watt, and Ed Shannon have answered the editor's call for assistance from time to time. Sam McChesney, editor-elect, stepped in, and constantly asked for work. His willingness to miss school, and to work late into the night have been greatly appreciated.

Finally, I wish to thank the other members of the staff, and only wish that space would permit me to do it individually. The cooperation of the student body as a whole for its entrusted responsibility is appreciated and I sincerely hope that my endeavors meet their approval.

THE EDITOR.

With "WHAT" Settled, The Question Becomes "WHEN"

THE successful market trader watches the tape to tell when "there's something in the wind". With the knowledge of past performance to check his judgment, he acts quickly to "get in on the ground floor".

Astute lawyers have the "What" settled in their minds —it's AMERICAN JURISPRUDENCE.

BRING YOUR GOLF HUNGER OVER HERE

There's two golf courses at The Homestead—the Cascades course is the preferred one. It's just a little doubtful whether any golfer has experienced all the things golf can do for him until he has played this Cascades course.

There are tennis courts too—both en-tout-cas and clay; and well mannered saddle horses that make perfect your delight in miles of mountain-and-valley trails; and a skeet field that tops any you've ever seen in beauty.

Then there's The Homestead itself — Washington and Lee boys have made it a preferred rendezvous for visiting with the folks back home.

It is only seventy miles to Virginia Hot Springs over excellent highways or if you don't mind a few miles of dirt road, through Goshen Pass shortens the distance to fifty miles.

A STANDARD is not an occasional fine result. It is the highest possible quality that can be consistently maintained. ANDRE STUDIO has become the STANDARD studio for College Annual Publications.

Everything to express, of skill, of technique, of artistry, is revealed in our prints. They are the only material proof of our ability, the only visible evidence of the value of our photographs and workmanship.
